Thinking Out Loud

H. M. L.

Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, declared in it, that it is self evident that all men are created equal. A few years later in drawing up a plan for the education of the youth of Virginia, he based it upon the assumption that children vary widely in intellectual gifts, some being born with far greater aptitude for learning than others. In other words he repudiated his statement in the Declaration of Independence. According to Frederick Winsor, writing in the current issue of the Atlantic, it is unfortunate that his first statement, though false was destined to live and influence our educational institutions for 150 years, while his second statement, which was true, is rarely referred to.

"The self evident truth is," says the author, "that intellectually all men are not born equal." Of course men are born, in an ideal Republic to equal opportunity, but very decidedly they are not born, with equal capacity to grasp it. But a great train of ills has flowed from the utterance of Thomas Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence. The tax payers money for a hundred years or more has been 50 per cent wasted upon the effort to give an academic education to those who have no capacity for it. Money has been squandered to educate brains where it would have been better to train hands that were able and willing, and which have been neglected. The crafts that the congenital non-scholarly children might have mastered and so become self sustaining and self respecting, were not taught, while languages, mathematics, history, were poured into countless containers that were actually mental sieves.

Except for our graduate and research schools of higher learning this is still largely the rule prevailing in our schools. Our California law which compels high school attendance until the age of 16 years, is not only a waste of the tax payers good money, it is a crime against children who are born to do things rather than to think things through, and who might have accomplished much had their hands been trained. It is true, however, that more and more craft schools are being instituted in the state's secondary institutions and these are beginning to give a good account of themselves.

We know of several schools in which students with average or below average intelligence are trained to be farmers. They breed and rear cattle, sheep, swine and horses. They learn to distinguish weed seeds and methods of eradication, they are taught dairying and poultry farming or the business of bee keeping. They compete over wide areas at the State Fair, and they step from the high school into self-supporting occupations with a pride in their work and a worthy purpose in life. On the other hand, how often it happens in secondary schools that fail to give courses in handicrafts and manual occupations that students graduate with a miserable smattering of Latin, algebra, history, or of literature, but fail of any positive accomplishment which would admit them to the universities. These students, resentful, unprepared, must perforce seek employment in the first job that comes along that their untrained hands find to do. We have watched them at this employment, their sullen faces as they bend over a hateful task. Misfits put to work, willy nilly, to earn their bread, with no sense of the dignity of honest labor, with no training even for the mastery of the job at hand, disappointed and envious of those of their more fortunate comrades who have gone on to the university.

Winsor in his Atlantic article makes a plea for more educational care of the 20 per cent of specially intelligent and gifted students in the secondary schools. He laments that they are pulled down and brought to the level of the average in order that our democratic doctrine that "allmen are created equal," may be demonstrated in the schools. The standards are lowered in order to give "diplomas" to the average.

But this is a plea that these minds that barely measure up to the great average or even fall below it, be given that practical kind of education that will be of value to them. In our Nevada City high school, for instance, now that we have at length obtained adequate buildings and equipment, the day may be near when a vocational school can be established fo those, the great majority in fact, who will not go to the universities. As valley schools have departments given over to agricultural science and training. What a fine thing it would be to establish in the high school in Nevada City a department for mining. To teach the boys the rudiments of mining ,drill sharpening, timbering and something of rock formations and safety practice, would measurably fit them for immediate employment when they graduated. The girls should have a general training in sewing, cooking and the home crafts generally, an enlargement of the present courses given in these subjects.

One of our constitutional guarantees is the right "to pursue happiness." Our schools should launch us equipped for that pursuit. There should be a cheerful teaching of pride in work within our capacities that we may master and do well, a philosophical acceptance of the fact of inequality in inherited mental gifts. No one who has observed with sympathy and understanding the career of Henry Ford would ever attribute to him even a rudimentary scholarship. But Ford found, whether with schooling or without it, the thing he could do well and that he loved to do. In other words he came nearer the goal, probably, than most of us, in the pursuit of happiness.

Jane Barton Bids Nev. City Mothers to Join Her Garden Trails

On the afternoons of May 19, 20 and 21, Jane Barton will conduct the Homecraft Institute in Nevada Theatre, covering the important phases of every department of household economics. The institute which will be absolutely free, is a splendid opportunity for California homemakers to confer with one of the west's leading home economists and for them to enjoy a program of informative and constructive information free of fuss and frills and specially prepared to meet the problems and needs of the small city and rural housewife. This year's institute features dozens of special California items—a California party with recipes for hilarity — flower arrangements for California homes—how to get husbands to eat salads — how to take best advantage of California foods in the simple and economical preparation of a meal—in short California homemaking suggestions of all sorts. And Jane Barton actually does all these things before your eyes. Not only does she discuss your problems but she shows you how to solve them by a practical demonstration.

Jane Barton's conferences are tremendously popular because everything which she presents from the platform has been fully tested and tried in her own home, and has passed successfully the critical inspection of her own family. Mrs B.arton, a graduate in Home Economics of the University of Illinois, is the Homecraft Editor of the Pacific Rural Press, and is in constant contact with thousands of homemakers throughout the state.

In the early days, California's pioneer women, struggling with the most primitive conditions, developed techniques and methods which were peculiarly suited to California conditions. With the rapid development of domestic science, and the coming of easy, modern methods, the best features of these practical old methods of laundry, kitchen, garden, and sewing craft, have been adapted to fit the pleasant modern life that is typical of California. Jane Barton has investigated these typical California customs and in her conferences, she tells her audience how to achieve them in their own homes.

Mrs. Barton is including several recipes which use product seldom appearing in published recipes before. They have been contributed by former attendants at the Homecraft Institute and have been carefully tested by the Homecraf Department of the Pacific Rural Press. Their economy of preparation and dietetic value as well as their popularity with every member of the family, make them particularly attractive. One of these many recipes is Lemon Pie with Honey Meringue and it is easy to make. Some of the other types of cookery that will be discussed by Mrs. Barton under the heading of kitchen craft are a new kind of frosting, new chicken recipes, recipes for sweet cream, sour cream and cottage cheese, vegetables prepared in unusual ways and many other exciting food hints.

California is fortunate this year in being the only state to have satisfactory fruit and vegetable crops. Drought conditions and unusual weather in the rest of America have seriously affected fruits. On the contrary, California housewives have ample supplies of the many delicious varieties which comprise California's fruits and vegetables. Mrs. Barton in this year's Homecraft Institute is featuring their use, preparation and preservation in many different ways. The recipes are specially tested for California's fruits ad will be printed in the programs which will be given out at the Institute, thus forming a valuable reference for every homemaker.

This year's Institute features many such delightful California recipes for every branch of the Homemaker's art, from decoration craft to laundry and party craft. Housewives and homemakers throughout the community are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to meet Mrs. Barton, and to hear her helpful and inspiring message.

If your home could be made more attractive, if you are interested in learning the latest and most helpful methods of modern homemaking, be sure to attend. The three sessions are scheduled for May 19, 20 and 21 at 2 p. m. at the Nevada Theatre. Jane Barton's conferences are planned to begin and end promptly, so that homemakers can get home in time to prepare the evening meal without rush or confusion.

California Homecraft Institute is brought to you under the joint auspices of the Nevada City Nugget and the Pacific Rural Press. Attend this great popular event, and bring your household economics up to date.

The Momecraft Institute is free and every homemaker welcome.

STATE ARRESTS 14,887 DRUNKEN DRIVERS IN 1936

Increase in traffic accidents involving intoxicated drivers or pedestrians, as shown by 1936 figures of the Department of Motor Vehicles presents a situation "which can be viewed only with the greatest concern," the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association declared in a statement today.

Intoxicated pedestrians, the motorists organization commented, are shown by statistics to present a problem as great if not greater than that of intoxicated drivers as accident factors.

Of the 2,838 fatal traffic accidents last year in California, according to the department report, at least 617 accidents resulting in the deaths of 678 persons are known to have involved drivers or pedestrians who had been drinking.

Since 1929, it was pointed out, the number of drivers who had been drinking prior to becoming involved in accidents has multiplied by more than four, while the number of pedestrians who had been drinking has increased five times.

A total of 4,182 "had been drinking" drivers were involved in accidents in 1936, the report continued, resulting in 46 fatal crashes and injuries to one or more persons in 3,776 of the accidents.

Concerning pedestrians under the influence of liquor, the report stated that of the 1,169 such pedestrians involved in accidents last year 211 were in fatal accidents and 958 received injuries.

There was a total of 14,887 persons brought into court throughout the state last year under various provisions of the Vehicle Code relating to intoxicated drivers, the report stated. Of this number, almost 97 per cent were convicted. Of those convicted, 2,045 received suspended sentences or probations, while 4,829 were sentenced to jails or road camps.

EARLY FOREST FIRES NEAR CAMPTONVILLE

CAMPTONVILLE, April 29.—The first forest fires of the season started Saturday, the first between the Burris Ranch and the Yuba river and the second near the site of the old Pendola Mill. The fire in the river canyon burned quite lively fanned by a strong wind. District Ranger Frank W. Meggers and the local CCC boys spent two days and a night putting it under control.

The cause of the fires is not known and is being investigated by Investigator J. D. Rafferty of the Tahoe National Forest. After the fires were under control a heavy storm came up with rain, snow and sleet so that they are now completely out.

Golden Gate Cavalcades

When cavalcades roll along all western highroads toward San Francisco for the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge, and the attendant Fiesta May 27 to June 2, they will carry to the ceremony the flags of the eleven western states.

The massed colors of these commonwealths of the west, their folds intermingled with the Star-spangled Banner, will be an inspiration to hundreds of the thousands of witnesses who will thrill to the knowledge that the west stands united as neighbors to celebrate the opening of the great structure across the Golden Gate.

The bridge itself is a link in transportation along the Pacific Coast. Its dedication is not only another phase of development in the great west. It is a mile-stone in the history of our nation.

A Cure for the Rush Act

Not so long ago the legislators at Sacramento were hopefully talking about adjournment by May 15. But today, being up to their necks in budget business and labor trouble, it begins to look as though they'll be in the capital for a good many days beyond that date.

Of course the lawmakers, just as ordinary mortals would be, are anxious to get back to home and family and to have some time for their private affairs. But let's hope that this year they'll avoid some of the patent evils of the last-minute legislative rush.

What usually happens is this. Bills by the dozen are brought on the floor and passed without any attempt being made to discover what is in them. Then these are tossed on the governor's desk, and verybody goes home but the governor.

He then, in effect, becomes a one-man legislature. It is up to him to sort through the whole batch, signing the ones he likes, discarding the ones he doesn't. So diverse are these bills many of which the lawmakers wouldn't think of passing if they read them, that the governor can vote "yes" or "no" unanimously on most any conceivable subject. Is this fair to the public, or to the governor either, for that matter?

A governor might cure them of this someday. He could sneak through a bill in the last-minute rush, and then when it came to his desk unread he could sign it. It would be a measure calling for a fifty per cent slash in all legislator's salaries.

They Scoff and Then Die

In the never-ending war against death on the highway, each individual, to contribute his part, must know the habits of the enemy—the habits of accidents. Where do accidents happen? Why do they happen?

An analysis of accidents in California, one of the most thorough and searching on record, was issued the other day by the State Department of Motor Vehicles. And here, briefly, are a few of its most revealing discoveries:

In every hundred accidents on city streets, there are five deaths, while on rural and private roads there are sixteen deaths per hundred accidents. Drivers between the ages of 20 and 29 years have more accidents than those of any other ten-year age group. Accidents involving drunken drivers or pedestrians increased nine per cent during 1936.

Of persons killed in traffic last year, 23 out of every hundred were women. Out of every hundred accidents, three were caused by mechanical defects of vehicles—faulty lights, or faulty brakes.

In all of these facts there is food for thought. But in one further discovery the very heart of California's traffic death problem is laid bare. It is a pity there is no way to sear it permanently into the mind of every driver who scoffs at the law—who scoffs and then crashes.

It is this—that by far the greatest number of California auto accidents occur on good roads, in daylight, during clear weather, and involve a violation of the lawful driving rules.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder if the time has come
To think of various things,
Of crowns and coronation robes,
And cats that stare at kings;
I wonder how our diplomats
Will look in long silk hose,
With cute knee breeches, frills of lace
And maybe ribbon bows.

I wonder if American representatives at the coronation of King George VI will reflect honor and glory upon our democratic institutions by wearing their trick costumes with becoming grace and dignity.

I wonder if long silken hose stretched over sturdy masculine calves will develop unsightly runs; if seams in trig knee breeches will give way at inopportune moments and halt the parade, and if Queen Mary hats perched upon polished brows will be held in place by straps under handsome double chins.

Imagine Governor Merriam, our perennial seretary of state and other worthy notables tricked out in long silk stockings and short pants! You can't; it's a mental impossibility!

What did Will Rogers wear when he walked and talked with kings? Oh, that was different; our Will was a king in his own right.

I wonder if this really is the three hundred and seventy-third anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare; who can tell, and what difference does it make? Enough for us to know that he enriched the world with treasures of wit and wisdom, pathos and philosophy that are immortal.

I give you this one jewel from his magic pen; beside it the Kohinor pales into insignificance and the notorious Hope diamond becomes as a wayside pebble.

"This above all to thine own self be true,
And it must follow as the night the day
Thou cans't not then be false to any man."

BRITAIN TO EASE NEW TAXES IF TRADE INJURED

LONDON, April 29.—Much relief is expressed here today at the decision the government has reached to modify its new tax on profits, thereby meeting so much of the flood of criticism that has been poured upon this measure as can be shown to be reasonable.

This decision was indicated in the House of Commons yesterday by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, who also emphasized the need for terminating the disastrous arms competition which has necessitated recourse to such a measure. "Every one of us", Mr. Chamberlain said, "must hope—none more than I — that some means may be found to put an end to this armaments race, but in the meantime we are absolutely bound to go on until we have put ourselves in a position in which we can feel we have attained safety. If from time to time we have to put up the bar so that we must jump higher and higher, we must be prepared to face that necessity rather than leave ourselves defenseless in an armed world."

Chamberlain to Make Inquiries

Asking not to be pressed for any immediate answer to the numerour objections which have been raised, Mr. Chamberlain was loudly cheered when he continued. "If I can be allowed an interval which must now elapse before the finance bill is introduced to make such inquiries as are open to me and to find out what are possible dangers in the way of injustices or inequalities then I'd better have a certain amount of elasticity so that I may conform to what may come to my notice."

This is taken to mean that while the fundamental of the tax is to be maintained—namely, to put the burden of rearmament as far as possible upon those who are making money out of present conditions in business. On the other hand, changes are to be made wherever the new measures can be shown to discriminate unfairly against either firms or individuals.

Export Business Hit

The main complaint against the tax has been that it hits unduly hard on big exporting businesses upon whose welfare Britain's economic prosperity largely depends.

Sir Robert Horne, one of the government's own supporters, has also declared that under it some companies would have to pay in taxation up to the unreasonable amount of 45 per cent of their post-slump increased profits, and some prviate firms up to 75 per cent.

Other claims are that there is need to discmininate between profits from armaments and those from ordinary business, also for relief for those concerns which have been specially hard hit in the recent world slump.

Meanwhile it is pointed out in responsible quarters that the heavy drop which has occurred here in share values in consequence of the announcement of the new tax has been grossly overdone.

FRAYED NERVES IN LEGISLATURE MENACE BILLS

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

"Legislative distemper" is a malady which quite frequently threatens to become epidemic during the latter stages of a legislative session, when nerves get frayed and lawmakers get their political fingers mangled in the wringer of public opinion.

Nor is it restricted to legislators. The gentlemen who are called "legislative representatives," when they are for you, or "lobbyists," if they're against you, likewise suffer from distemper on occasion. And back in the home districts, the general public often suffers from the same affliction, pouring out its vitrol in heated condemnation of all things legislative and particularly legislators.

Yet short tempers and sulphuric outbursts accomplish little, either in the legislature or in any other phase of life, and often, in legislative affairs, they are responsible for the defeat of much good legislation and the enactment of much that is bad.

This year, at Sacramento, there have already been a few signs of distemper, with both legislators and public representatives departing from facts and reason to indulge in personalities, loose charges and angry abuse. Fortunately, however, the great majority of the legislators have kept their heads and their self respect, with the last few weeks bringing indications that many of the more serious conflicts will be settled by working out reasonable compromise proposals, with decent regard for the rights of everyone concerned.

With the welfare of the entire state at issue in much of the proposed legislation, and with radically changed conditions creating problems which call for cool heads and intelligent deliberation, the present legislature needs is a rational, fair-minded "give and take" attitude much more than it needs impassioned oratory or spectacular flights in search of an elusive Utopia.

One of the unfortunate hang-overs of depression has been an apparent disposition on the part of the unthinking to conclude that "anything which is big is bad." Originally, this doctrine was applied to all forms of "big business." More recently it has been construed to apply to anyone who survived the depression without going on relief, despite the fact that someone had to pay the bills for those who couldn't pay their own.

For a time, the "forgotten man" was idealized to the point where the man who hadn't been completely forgotten was put down—by a certain section of the community, at least—as an enemy of society. It became customary for employees, seeking shorter hours and bigger wages, to speak of employers as their "enemies."

This atmosphere still existed when the legislature convened and has had a pronounced effect on much of the legislation suggested. That there has been a gradual return to sounder values in recent weeks is a tribute to the legislators, for the clamor of organized minorities is ever louder than the voice of the hard-working majority.

To use an inelegant political expression, but a forceful one, many of the lawmakers are proving that "they can take it, as well as dish it out." The few who can't "take it' are the ones who most frequently evidence symptoms of legislative distemper, "viewing with alarm" and inveighing against all successful enterprise as a sop to the unsuccessful whom they have failed to assist.

In the interest of the general public—which produces the wealth, pays the freight and taxes, foots the relief bill, supports the schools and provides for an orderly society—it is to be hoped that the closing days of the present legislative session will be marked by rational, cooperative action, rather than bursts of temper and cheap personalities. And there is seemingly hope that such will be the case.

WEEKEND EVENTS FOR MOTOR TRIPS

Many and varied are the attractions during the coming week for the week end tourist. May Day will be celebrated in nearly every community with some localities going in for extensive entertainment.

Of outstanding interest will be the 9th Annual California Spring Garden Show in Oakland, April 29 to May 2. Since its inception it has attained the enviable reputation of being one of the most interesting and largest of the garden shows throughout the country. Each year a different theme is carried out with the displays. This year it will be nature's garden, the kind of garden that you and I and the rest of us would like to visualize as our own. Twenty-four to thirty waterfalls, and exceptional displays of azaleas and rhododendrons and a $20,000 orchid exhibit are outstanding features which will include exhibits of practically every flower that can be grown in California.

At Fort Bragg, in Mendocino county, the rhododendron are still in full bloom and the annual Rhododendron Festival is being held on May 1.

At Palo Alto, the Annual May Day Fete and Pet Parade will be held May 1. Stockton has a gorgeous flower show over the first and second, and at Lodi on the same dates the American Legion is holding its picnic.

From the 2d to the 8th, San Jose State College will celebrate its Diamond Jubilee at San Jose.

Ae Berkeley on May 7-9, the Berkeley Pageant of Land and Sea will celebrate the opening of the new million dollar aquatic park.

On May 7-8 Hanford will hold its annual rodeo and on the 8th and 9th, the Mother Lode Rodeo will be held at Sonora. Those who have deferred visiting the Romantic Mother Lode region will find in these rodeos a good excuse to visit the historic spots of the old days of '49.

SACRAMENTO, April 29. — A state budget totaling $438,000,000 for the 1937-39 biennium was passed by the assembly this week after $8,000,000 had been slashed from the recommendations of Governor Frank F. Merriam.

The cut in budget was attacked by the minority Republican group of assemblymen as "buck passing," the G. O. P. charging the difference will be made up in special appropriation bills.

Most of the reduction of Governor Merriam's recommendations was accomplished by reducing the relief fund, and transferring to this fund $7,250,000 for construction and repair of state institutions and colleges, originally designated in the general fund.

President Roosevelt's message to congress urging economy will have no effect on his earlier recommendations of a $15,000,000 appropriation for the Central Valley Water Project, advices from Washington said this week. This item already is in the budget.

Sacramento's proposed 30-foot river channel and deep sea port took a step forward last week when it was approved by the sub-committee of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. Endorsement by army engineers is the next step in the program to secure the channel. W. G. Stone, manager of the Chamber of Commerce transportation department, has been in Washington since early in April in the interests of the project.

California should be on a cash basis by February, 1938, Treasurer Charles G. Johnson said last week in announcing that the state's current financial conditions is the "brightest in many years." He said $10,664,752 state warrants issued from July 15 to October 28, 1936, will be called for payment on May 12.

Camp Sacramento, the capital city's summer camp, will be opened on June 20 this year, J. B. Maloney, superintendent, announced this week. Sacramento Chamber of Commerce plans to enter a float depicting Sutter's Fort in the Golden Gate Bridge fiesta parade marking the opening of the gigantic structure on May 27. M. Amine Youssef, royal Egyptian minister to the United States was a visitor in Sacramento last week. He was entertained by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and was speaker at a special session of the state legislature.

Governor Merriam last week signed bills requiring shutdown of liquor service between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. and defining fluid milk, fluid cream and retail stores in marketing agreements. Schedules based on a 50 cent toll for passenger automobiles on the Golden Gate bridge have been announced. A final check up by the state board of equalization revealed actual income to the state from the three per cent sales tax during 1936 was $81,478,533.05. The assembly refused to withdraw the tabled anti-criminal syndicalism bill from committee by a vote of 45 to 29.

GOLD LAKE ROAD AIM OF SIERRA CO. BOARD

The Gold Lake road project was taken up at the last meeting of the Sierra county board of supervisors and it was reported that the possibilities for the Gold Lake road project going forward are very good. Mr. Lombardi, supervisor, reported that the electric company, which owns much land in the section, is willing to give ground for an 80 foot roadway and the U. S. bureau of public roads will assist in the financial end. The electric company did not care to concede some land on the lake shore, as some time or other, they anticipate the constuction of a power plant there, and wish the road to cut out around the proposed site. The work will be delayed some because surveyors cannot get in to locate the road because of snow in the high mountains. Mr. Lombardi believes the job will be done and another great beauty spot in the county opened to sightseers and nature lovers.

Roads is the one important thing that Sierra county needs to permit tourists and sightseers to come in and see the wonders of the section. The persistent efforts for these improvements, put forth for many months, it now appears, are beginning to bear fruit.

FILTER PLAN IS PROPOSED FOR CITY SWIM POOL

City Councilman Frank Davies, H. M. Leete, park board member, Herbert Hallet, street superintendent, with Ted Sigourney at the wheel drove to Sacramento Saturday to examine Sacramento's method of filtering water, with a view to adopting some plan for filtering the water in the municipal swimming pool.

Owing to the fact the city water supply carries a little sediment, even when it appears the clearest, the park board has for sometime been studying methods of clearing the water so that the life guard at the pool would be enabled to see the bottom of the pool in its deepest part at any time.

The board has proposed and the city council is now considering a method of using the water of Little Deer Creek at the pool, leading it by ditch and pipe to a sump near the present lily pond, and then lifting by a centrifugal pump to the filters, to be constructed above the pool, running from the filters into the pool by gravity. It would also be an easy matter to turn the present city supply of water into the filters in case there was ever a shortage of water in Little Deer Creek.

EASY PROCEDURE TO COLLECT OLD AGE BENEFITS

Procedure for the handling of claims for lump sums under the Federal old-age benefits plan of the Social Security Act is believed to be more simple than any other plan yet devised for similar use by any government agency or private business, according to James B. Cress in charge of the San Francisco office of the Bureau of Federal Old-Age Benefits, 402 Humboldt Bank Building, 785 Market street.

A simple form has been devised for the use of the five different types of claimants, (1) wage earners, (2) widows or widowers, (3) other close relatives, (4) executors or administrators, and (5) guardians or committees.

Claimants will be required to file only one of these forms depending on the circumstances of a particular case. The only supporting papers required of claimants are (1) proof of birth where claim is for an amount in excess of $100; (2) proof of death if wage earner is deceased, and (3) proof of appointment where the application is filed by xecutor, administrator, guardian or committee.

The simplicity of the forms makes unnecessary the employment of attorneys or claims agents to assist claimants.

The employer may be requested to file a statement giving only the total amount of wages paid the employees and the employment period.

Over 1,500,000 persons in California have already applied for Social Security account numbers. All of these or their estates will eventnally be entitled to fle clams for the payment of Federal old-age benefits. Over 600,000 are in Northern California.

To date only a small portion of the persons entitled to file claims have made application. However, it is stimated that in the United States there will be a thousand cases a day entitled o apply for lump-sum benefits. In California it is estimated this number will amount to about 1,500 per month, and in the bay region over 400 cases per month will be entitled to apply for lump-sum payments. About one-third of these payments will go to persons who have reached age 65, and the balance to the estates of workers who have died since January 1, 1937. At tthis early date the individual claims will not be large, as the amount due is 3 1-2 per cent of the wages earned in covered employments since Januuary 1, 1937, but there will be a contiual increase in their value as the amount of wages earned since January 1, 1937 grows larger.

Ask the State to Keep Its Word

¶ In accordance with California law, the builders of the Carquinez and Antioch Bridges obtained legal franchises from the County on the left bank of the stream, representing the two counties to be connected.

¶ These county franchises gave us full authority to erect and maintain the two toll bridges until 1948, WHEN THE PROPERTIES AUTOMATICALLY REVERT TO PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

¶ The State Legislature ratified these franchises four years later... AFTER THE BRIDGES WERE BUILT AND THE ENTIRE COSTS OF THE PIONEER ENTERPRISE WERE KNOWN... and the Governor signed the ratification.

¶ We who invested in these bridges did so with the understanding that California's law was binding and its word was good. But now it is proposed to ignore the State's solemn pledge, take over the bridges and maintain them out of the gasoline tax funds paid by all the people... instead of from tolls paid by the users, as the franchises provided.

¶ We urge those who believe in the sanctity of contracts and those who oppose the needless diversion of gasoline tax funds to WRITE YOUR REPRESENTATIVES AT SACRAMENTO against this proposal.

Let California Keep Faith!

ROTARIANS HEAR PROF. BRICKLEY ON AUSTRALIA

Prof. Michael Brickley of the Sacramento Junior College gave a talk on Australia at the meeting of the Rotary club yesterday. Prof. Brickley was born in Australia. He described its geology, its animal and plant life and the Australian black men, aborigenes, who are rapidly disappearing before the advance of white civilization.

The black men, Prof. Brickley stated, retained the primitive character of earth's first men. They are wonderfully athletic, learn games easily, but are debarred from contesting in the Australian national sport, cricket, because they are far more adept than the white athletes who belong to the various Australian cricket leagues, corresponding to American baseball leagues. They are barred for the same reason that American negroes are barred from contests in baseball with American league teams, namely because they are superior at such games than the whites.

Owing to the fact the black men were peculiarly unintelligent in the matter of providing food, living mainly on fresh water fish, they never increased to any great number. One of their religious peculariities led to their decimination by the early white settlers, who massacred them without mercy. The bush, or black man would built huge fires at night to keep away evil spirits. The white settlers only had to watch for these fires at night, surround their camps and shoot them down. Of later years of course, an enlightened and benevolent government has done its utmost to preserve this primitive race from extinction.

In the time of the gold rush, when bandits became a terror to the mining communities, the whites were finally obliged to call on the black men to track down the bandits. One of the criminal groups of historical notoriety was the Kelly gang, which the black men ferreted out for the white authorities to exterminate.

The continent, or island of Australia, is some 200 square miles larger than the United States. It probably constituted one of the first areas of dry land in the world, being above water while the Himalaya mountains were still submerged.

Prof. Brickley and Harold Brayton who accompanied him here, was a guest yesterday afternoon and evening of Mr. and Mrs. George Legg. Young Brayton is a sophomore at the Sacramento Junior College, majoring in history and a pupil of Prof. Brickley. The fifth of the series of lectures has been well attended since it began and keen interest has been reflected in spirited discussions of the several topics dealing with European political and social conditions, especially England and Spain.

TWO UNCLES OF NEVADA CITY WOMAN SUCCUMB

Mrs. Howard Burr returned Monday evening from San Francisco, having been called there by the sudden passing of her aged uncle, John Pacheco. A series of sad and happy events filled the short stay. When family members returned to San Jose they found another uncle, John Martin, 89, dead on the floor of his room. After an inquest Mrs. Burr attended his funeral. A nephew, Edward Pacheco was christened into the Catholic church. Little Jean Wright who visited Mrs. Burr in Nevada City last summer was in a group of 65 girls and 60 boys who received communion at a service in St. James Catholic church in San Francisco Sunday.

CONGRESSMAN BARES NATIONAL BOOZE SCANDAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 29.—"The whisky trust is one of the biggest monopolies ever known in this country and is rapidly becoming a national scandal," declared Congressman Claude A. Fuller of Arkansas, in a sensational attack which is echoing through legislative halls in Washington today, as he renewed his fight for a special investigating committee to probe the multi-million dollar liquor lobby.

Whisky and bottle trusts are flagrantly violating anti-trust laws and employing federal officials for their "influence value" at fabulous salaries, Congressman Fuller charged.

In submitting his resolution calling for a special investigating committee for the purpose of supoening officials of the whisky trust, Fuller said that nine distilleries are selling 80 per cent of the whisky and that they maintain a "powerful lobby with millions for expense and for hiring influential executives with strong political connections."

Among those he named as in the employ of powreful liquor interests and their salaries were the following: Dr. James M. Doran, former Federal Prohibition Enforcement Administrator, $30,000 per year; W. Forbes Morgan, former treasurer of the Democratic Committee, employed for a period of five years at $100,000 a year; Grover Whelan, New York politician, $75,000 per year. Morgan recently died and the "trust" is now looking for a high-powered politician to take his place.

WORK TO BE RESUMED ON SHAMROCK MINE

F. W. Siddall, managing director of the Sharmrock Gold Mining company with property adjacent to the Ruby mine in Sierra county, reports that he will resume work in the next few days with a crew of five men. Siddall states that the Shamrock was formerly the Lost Mexican claims. He proposes resumption of work on modest but steady basis. The mine is owned by two groups of investors, one in Tacoma and the other in San Francisco.

A $7,000 limousine caught up with a small car and the owner of the big machine couldn't resist the temptation to slow up and jolly the other driver a bit.

"Heavens, man," he said, "what is it about your car that makes such a dreadful rattling sound?"

"Oh, that," said the driver of the small car, "is the $6500 jingling around in my pocket."

She came into the police station with a picture in her hand.

"My husband has disappeared," she sobbed. "Here is his picture, I want you to find him."

The sergeant looked up from the photograph.

"Why?" he asked.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guenther left Tuesday for St. Helena where Mrs. Guenther will remain for a time for her health. After a short stay Mr. Guenther will return home.

KEESLING WILL BE GOLDEN GATE FIESTA ORATOR

SAN FRANCISCO, April 29.—Plans for the official dedication to traffic of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District in cooperation with the officials of the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta.

Francis V. Keesling, noted San Francisco attorney, and former director of the bridge district, and gifted speaker, is to be the orator of the day. Mr. Keesling was prominently identified with the building of the bridge from the time of its inception, and served for many years as chairman of the district's building committee.

It is planned to have the ceremonies start on the Marin county side of the mighty bridge with the dedication of the Waldo approach. The Waldo approach dedication is in charge of a committee, representing the Redwood Empire counties, headed by Harry Ridgway.

This committee has mapped an impressive program for the approach dedication in which bridge directors and city, state and federal officials will participate.

Mr. Keesling will speak at the ceremonies on the San Francisco end of the bridge at Crissy Field, where a crowd of 25,000 will assemble. His speech will be broadcast to the nation through arrangements made with the three national radio broadcasting systems.
